

AMATEUR MAT MEN GRAPPLE TONIGHT

Prof. Joyce's Big Show at Carroll Institute Has Lots of Class.

PAGAN'S SHOWING WILL BE WATCHED

Won Two Out of Three Bouts in Preliminaries—Good
Heavy Match.

The finals of the wrestling tourney which will decide the District amateur champions in the various classes will start at 8:30 p. m. today in the Carroll Institute Gymnasium.

The class shown in the preliminaries held in Ryan Gymnasium, at Georgetown University, last week, justifies the statement of those in charge of the tourney, that the bouts tonight should be among the most interesting ever pulled off in this city. The work of Al Pagan, the George Washington University entrant, who made such a creditable showing in the preliminary bouts, will be watched with much interest. Out of three bouts in which he participated last week, he gained two decisions and only lost the third after forcing his opponent to the limit. Tonight he figures in a bout with T. P. Mayhew, the husky captain of the National Guard grapplers, who will undoubtedly prove a worthy opponent.

Another match which will largely interest the spectators is one which will decide the heavyweight title. In this Ed Kerwin, the hefty Georgetown Preparatory grapple star, will be pitted against Carl Mueller, representing the Potomac Boat Club. Both men have proved themselves masters of the game, and when they come together the fur should fly.

Georgetown University will be well represented with five entrants in the various classes, a fact which proves that the boys across the creek are taking kindly to the wrestling game.

The Contenders.

The contenders in the various classes follows:

116-pound class—Charles Burton, Carroll Institute, vs. J. E. Gaughan, Georgetown University.

117-pound class—C. Ross, Tremont Athletic Club, vs. E. Goucher, Memorial Athletic Club.

Special—C. A. Cogswell, Georgetown University (118 pounds), vs. I. T. Allison, Carroll Institute (120 pounds).

125-pound class—T. A. Gull, Carroll Institute, vs. H. Foley, Memorial Athletic Club.

150-pound class—T. P. Mayhew, National Guards, vs. A. Pagan, George Washington University.

155-pound class—R. Moorman, Y. M. C. A., vs. M. H. Sittling, Georgetown University.

160-pound class—F. Friel, Memorial Athletic Club, vs. A. Chism, Memorial Athletic Club.

165-pound class—R. Vlyman, Georgetown University, vs. R. Riley, Carroll Institute.

Heavy-weight class—Ed Kerwin, Georgetown University, vs. Carl Mueller, Potomac Boat Club.

HUNT CLUBS GAIN SOME CONCESSIONS

Will Have Six Out of Nine on Committee to Control
Their Races.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—There has been a clearing of the underbrush for the racing season of 1909 in New York State. It began with a discussion of the differences between the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association and the Hunt Clubs, which claimed that the rules were too stringent and that there should be a differentiation between one and two-day meets, exclusively amateur, and those which are quasi-professional, and to which gate money is charged.

There is now more than a practical certainty that all disputes will be bridged over satisfactorily; that there will be a committee of nine, six from the Hunt Club and three from the National Association, which will have in their keeping the control of the Hunt Clubs. The only question at all in abeyance when the meeting adjourned was the limitation of authority of this committee of nine.

MOTOR BOAT CROWD TWICE AS LARGE

Attendance This Year Estimated at 80,000, Including Some Russian Royalty.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Having broken every record made by any similar exhibition, the annual motor boat show has closed.

The attendance in Madison Square Garden since Monday, February 15, is estimated to have attained the phenomenal total of 80,000 persons, exactly twice as many as visited last year's show. Despite stormy weather, the usual large crowds inspected the exhibits. It is said 70 per cent more sales were made last week by the exhibitors than at last year's show.

Among the visitors yesterday was the Princess Lazarovich Hrobolavovich, a cousin of the Czar of Russia. The princess and her husband have been in New York several days, and they made inquiries in the Garden as to the cost of and proper equipment for a motor yacht in the Mediterranean.

HOPE FOR RACING.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 24.—Thomas C. McDowell and Woodford Clay, two Kentucky turfmen, firmly believe that the racing game in the East is not dead yet, and both are preparing strings of horses to send to New York for racing as soon as the spring race meeting is over. The racing game is not dead yet, and both are preparing strings of horses to send to New York for racing as soon as the spring race meeting is over. The racing game is not dead yet, and both are preparing strings of horses to send to New York for racing as soon as the spring race meeting is over.

MORAN CONCILIATORY.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Owen Moran, a little English fighter, is again after the scalp of Abe Attell. The Englishman's manager has posted $500 forfeit for another go between these two little fellows. Moran will allow Attell to name the weight and distance. The two boys have already fought twice on the coast, both bouts being draws.

INSTANT BOWLING GROWING IN FAVOR

Philadelphia Has Another Successful 24-Hour Tournament for Two-Men Teams—McGeary Rolls Nineteen Hours, Finishing Second.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 24.—Arthur Hussey and Charles Gehman won the Central boys' instant bowling tournament, which ended last night, knocking down 975 pins in fifty-two games.

This pair led the other eleven teams during the entire contest. Hussey did the bulk of the work and rolled 153 pins. Arthur McGeary and E. C. Johnson, who finished second, fifty-six pins behind, were within thirteen pins of their total at the forty-second game, McGeary bowled for nineteen hours, was rolling at that time and took part in about thirty-three games, and is the likely winner of the $10 average prize. Charles Trucks registered high single game score, in the last game, getting 247 pins. He started off with four strikes, made two misses, a strike, a miss and three strikes.

The contestants were closely bunched for the various positions. Flood by a great exhibition jumped from tenth to third position and lost out for second places by seventy-six pins in the final games. Trucks and Dungan, who won the Casino alley tournament a couple of weeks ago, topping over 10,000 pins in fifty-six games, finished fourth. Trucks did not have his regular bowling ball. Thorneby and Sharp captured sixth place from Hamilton and Knox by one pin, 9,248 to 9,247, while Hardy and Dampman won eighth position from Harry Wolfe and Fochl by the same margin, 9,052 to 9,051.

The prize money, $10, will be awarded the five winning teams; $80 to the first, $20 to second, $35 to the third, $20 to the fourth and $15 to the fifth, with $10 going to the best average man. Manager Denney will distribute the prizes this afternoon.

Hussey and C. Gehman..... 9,715
McGeary and Johnson..... 9,669
Flood and J. Trucks..... 9,583
C. Trucks and Dungan..... 9,432
George and Leslie..... 9,248
Thorneby and Sharp..... 9,247
Hamilton and Knox..... 9,247
Hardy and Dampman..... 9,052
Wolfe and Fochl..... 9,051
Manning and W. Gehman..... 8,912
Mercadante and Winters..... 8,894
Thompson and Redden..... 8,805

RULERS OF GOLF PASS THAT RULE

Professionals in Other
Sports Declared to Be
Pros. on the Links.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The executive committee of the United States Golf Association has followed the lead of the Western Golf Association by adopting a new amateur rule, which is more stringent than the old one, and consequently more difficult to evade.

In future, any one who acts as a caddy or caddy master, after the age of sixteen will forfeit his amateur standing.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

While the new definition starts rather drastically by debaring all who are, or may have been, professionals in other branches of athletics it reaches itself by exempting those now rated as amateurs. Were this not done the new rule would be certain to work a hardship on many prominent amateurs of the present time who in the old days received salaries as professionals or semi-professionals.

CHAMPION THROWER HAS PASSED AWAY

John Hatfield Hurdled Baseball 400 Feet 7 1-2 Inches, and It Still Stands.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—John V. R. Hatfield, thirty years ago one of the best known baseball players in the United States, is dead at his former home at 156 Fifth avenue, Long Island City, aged sixty-two years.

Hatfield played ball in the days of old E. K. Edwards and Mutuals, and he also held the world's record for a long distance throw of a baseball, 400 feet 7 1-2 inches. Since that time hundreds of baseball enthusiasts have attempted to equal or surpass this record, but without success. It is said that Fitcher Ed Crane, the Giants, once accomplished the feat, but owing to lack of official corroboration Hatfield's long distance throw remained the standard.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the bookmakers. He was also well-known in Manhattan. He was a member of the Turf Benevolent Association. His widow and one daughter survive him.

Hatfield's brother "Gill" Hatfield, who was a member of the Giants, after his retirement from the ball field Hatfield became interested in racing, and up to the close of the tracks last season was a familiar figure among the